THE WHITE WINGS OF PEACE.

Since the meeting of the California editors at Santa Barbara the white wings of peace have been stretched from Ukiah to San Diego, and the editoricl hatchet has been wrenched from its handle and buried with the edge down.

Louis Munson of Banning, no longer alludes to H. A. Peabody of Santa Ana as a baldheaded deciple of boodle, and Gardner & Hart of the Pacific Monthly speak now of "Brother" Ayer and "Brother" Buckingham, and "Brother" Craig, when it wasnot so before.

A few days and nights under the same roof did the business. About a hundred people who had been giving each other particular fits for several years became a sort of big family together for about a week, and they reached the conclusion that nearness instead of distance lent enchantment.

After one has been for several years heaping epithets on a man he has never seen, and then sits under a vine clad veranda at Santa Barbara with a bright, lovely woman and eats ice cream and strawberries for half an hour with her, to discover that she is the wife of the particular fiend of darkness you have been exchanging editorial cannonades with, and the man himself comes along and proves to be a round-faced, jolly good fellow (who later in the evening pledges eternal friendship over the tenth Bozanta cocktail); after all these things happening, it changes the editorial gait somewhat, and after you have drank, (too much, maybe) with him and danced with his wife and daughter, then the journalistic horizon changes from a sombre to a rosy hue, and you go back home feeling that your contemporaries are really of the "esteemed" sort, and not all corruptionists, corporation hirelings and petty larceny thieves. The California papers, with the exception perhaps of those published in Oakland (whose editors did not attend the Convention) and a few in San Francisco (who ignored it) are now all on a peaceful footing and instead of fighting among themselves are directing their attention to the general public enemy of all, the bloated and thieving advertising agent.

IT SEEMS STRANGE.

However much it may seem to in the eyes of the Independent, the Silver State does not think because our laws sauction one form of iniquity all restraint should be thrown off and every swindling device legalized, but it does believe that if the Independent and other papers which have so much to say against a lottery, which we cannot have in this State without changing the Constitution, were actuated by moral motives, they would have a little to say in favor of the repeal of the Gaming Act. -Silver State.

It does seem a little queer that these highly moral organs do not open a crusade against faro and stud poker. Here is a fine field for a real moral anti-gambling paper to make a record.

We feel as the Silver State does; that when the papers begin to call for a repeal of the Gaming Act they really mean business.

There is a conductor in one of the Market street cable lines, San Francisco, who disposes of the money taken for fares in an entirely original way. A reporter recently saw him receive a nickel, put it in his mouth, collect another and deposit in the same place and so on until he had a mouthful of small coin. He made change from a quantity of nickels carried in his pocket, and when his supply had apparently given out he emptied his mouthful of change into his hand, counting $1.80 in nickels, dimes and quarters .- Examiner.

George C. Wells, the nineteen year old boot-black at Santa Rosa who was arrested for robbing the lock-boxes in the postoffice, has confessed to having been engaged in robbing boxes for quite a perlod of time,

The quality of beef and other meats procurable at the butcher shop of M. C. Gardner, Jr., cannot be surpassed anywhere. All beef in the shop comes from steers, as good beef cannot be secured from cows.
